APRIL 11, 2006

In its continuing effort to recognise teachers for their outstanding contributions in the field of education, Higgs & Johnson, Counsel & Attorneys-at-Law today marked ten years as corporate sponsor of the national H & J Excellence in Teaching Award.

The award, presented this year to winner Tamika Cartwright of Claridge Primary School, is a cash prize that rewards educators who exemplify excellence in the teaching profession and leadership development.

Said Higgs & Johnson Partner, John K. F. Delaney: "Higgs & Johnson understands that so much of the course of one's life is dependent on the quality of his or her education. We are proud to support educators who work consistently to provide a sound instructional base for their students and who dedicate themselves to fostering the success of those in their care. This is truly nation-building and we hope by this award that we are lending a hand to that effort."

Higgs & Johnson recognises the National Teacher of the Year Programme and the H & J Excellence in Teaching Award as components of a prestigious national honours programme that focuses public attention on excellence in teaching, and applauds Ms. Cartwright for being selected for this major honour.
